Message from the Vice Chancellor

Dear Readers,

Wish you a very happy, prosperous and promising New Year 2025!

I feel immense pleasure to present this edition of our quarterly e-Digest as the Vice Chancellor of this esteemed institution. I am deeply committed to building a strong foundation and driving RV University (RVU)'s vision of excellence in education, research and community impact as well as fostering open communication, collaboration and shared governance to ensure that we work together to achieve our collective goals.

This edition marks a two-year milestone of our e-Digest "RVU's Pursuit of Excellence," a platform providing information about RVU's achievements and developments.

Yet another milestone was the Bhoomi Pooja for RVU's Mysuru campus signifying our expansion outside Bengaluru. The Mysuru campus will be one of the world-class 'off-campuses' of RVU boasting of contemporary courses on par with global standards.

The quarter also witnessed the inauguration of the state-of-the art RVU Library generously supported by the Brigade group. The new library is a dynamic hub of learning, blending digital and physical resources and providing a rich learning experience to its users.

I am also delighted to say that RVU was recognised recently as one of the fastest growing universities which is a testament to our progress and high potential among other reputed universities in the city.

Varsity Report Raises Severe Infra Concerns

By Anand Prasad

Bengaluru: Bengaluru may be one of the fastest growing cities, with its population reaching over 14 crore, but it is still struggling to provide adequate public infrastructure. A recent report by RV University, a leading research institution, has highlighted the severe lack of public toilets in the city. The report found that there are only 803 public toilets in Bengaluru, which is a stark contrast to the city's population of over 14 crore. The report also pointed out that the existing public toilets are in poor condition and do not meet the needs of the city's diverse population. It called for immediate action to improve the public toilet infrastructure in Bengaluru.

Bengaluru's Toilet Crisis: India's Silicon Valley has one public facility for every 1.7 lakh people

Last Updated Oct 05, 2024, 11:03:00 AM IST

Synopsis
Bengaluru's public sanitation infrastructure is insufficient. RV University's study finds only 803 public toilets for a city of 14 crore people. Issues include lack of route maps, gender-free disability safety, poor lighting, and inadequate facilities for disabled individuals and parents. Major improvements are needed to meet the demands of the growing population.

Bengaluru, one of India's fastest growing cities with an estimated population of 14 crore, is facing challenges in public sanitation infrastructure. A recent report by RV University highlighted that the city has only 803 public toilets, which is far from adequate for its residents and

Study exposes poor public toilet infrastructure in city's popular hangouts

While India declared itself open defecation-free on October 2, 2019, its Silicon Valley, Bengaluru, continues to have a crumbling public toilet infrastructure. A recent study revealed that along with a general lack of public toilets, there are hygiene, privacy, accessibility, and safety issues with existing toilets.

Conducted by the Centre for Disability Justice and Inclusion (CDJI) of RV University, the study investigated 65 public toilets across public spaces in the city. With only 360 public toilets serving more than one crore people, the problem starts with finding a public toilet.

The study highlights that even places like Church Street and Commercial Street, with high footfall, lack nearby toilets. Despite a few popular places like Lal Bagh and Cubbon Park, due to the lack of proper route maps, visitors are forced to play treasure hunts to find one and relieve themselves.

Of the 65 toilets investigated in the study, 52 had no route maps around them, and Google Maps also proved ineffective.

"During our investigation, we observed five instances where there was no toilet, despite the Google map showing one at the exact location," said Meghna Sharma, Co-author of the report and Director of CDJI.

Most public toilets in the city are pay-and-use, which leads to another problem of dynamic pricing. The report highlighted that while the usual price is five Rs, it doubles to 10 in areas like St. Marks Road and Shivajinagar.

Most places charge different prices for urinals and water closets, leading to a gendered price gap. This price rise largely impacts people who heavily rely on them, like street vendors, gig workers, and homeless people.

While the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act, 2016 requires all public buildings, including public toilets, to be accessible for persons with disabilities, the research found that of the 65 investigated, only 14 had specific stalls for persons with disabilities. However, seven of them were locked, one was being used as a storeroom, and another was built in a way that no wheelchair user could enter it.

However, the report also highlighted that in two public toilets, there were separate toilets for transgender individuals.

Although sanitary napkins are a fundamental need for menstruating individuals, only two public toilets displayed signage of their availability according to the report. Upon enquiry by the researchers, it was disclosed that they can be sourced on request from nearby pharmacies by male staffers of the toilet, which could lead to uncomfortable situations.

The usability of already limited toilets is further limited by a lack of sanitation, insufficient lighting, and an unsafe environment.

Initiated and led by Assistant Professors Ms. Meghna Sharma and Mr. Parvaz Lamba, who head CDJI and CGS respectively, the study involved active participation from students at the School of Law.

The report marks 10 years of the Swachh Bharat Mission (SBM) and explores the role of public toilets in fostering equitable urban spaces while addressing progress and persistent challenges in Bengaluru's sanitation infrastructure.

Based on field research covering 65 public toilets, the report highlights key issues such as inadequate signage, poor maintenance, lack of accessible facilities for persons with disabilities, and the absence of gender-inclusive restrooms. It also underscores the disproportionate impact on women and marginalised communities, emphasising the need for inclusive urban planning that prioritises maintenance, accessibility, and equity.

The report demonstrates the importance of collaborative efforts between faculty and students in addressing societal issues and provides critical insights and recommendations for improving public sanitation.

The report was extensively covered by the leading national English and language media.
